Fredy flies through the park. Suddenly he sees crows and eagles chasing him!

Fredy is a parrot. He is black, orange and green and medium sized. Fredy lives in the tree-tops in Tofino.

Fredy eats nuts and sometimes people drop food on the beach. Most of all, Fredy loves chips!

This morning Fredy is feeling sleepy. He wakes up because of too much noise from other birds, singing and chirping in the trees. Fredy decides to fly along the beach to find some food. It is a sunny day with lots of people on the beach. They are surfing and swimming.

“Oh look!” cries a little girl. “What a beautiful bird!”

Fredy feels proud of his colourful feathers. He flies on, looking down at the beach, searching for food.

All of a sudden three crows start chasing him. They are jealous that he is so beautiful and the people like him so much. All Fredy wants is to be accepted by the crows.

The crows poke Fredy with their beaks and try to knock him down. Luckily the people start to throw food at the crows and the crows fly away from the beach.

That night the crows sneak in and put mud on Fredy's feathers. Fredy feels something wet and wakes up in the dark. In the morning, before the people come, he goes to the ocean to wash the mud off so that the people won't see.

Fredy decides he can give each of the crows one of his beautiful feathers to wear. Now they are all beautiful birds. The crows are so happy and accept Fredy. They all become friends, flying around the beach together.

The End.
